Harvard Sinks Cornell

ITHICA, N. Y.—Harvard piled up a lead early in the second half, then hung on to defeat Cornell, 78-72, in an Ivy League game tonight. James Brown, who led all scorers with 21 points, paced the Crimson with 11 points in the first 10 minutes of the second half.

The teams played evenly in the opening half, with Cornell's 51 per cent floor shooting keeping the Big Red in contention. It was Cornell's ninth straight loss and 14th of the season.
