Special to The New York Times

PRINCETON, N.J., Feb. 21 —Despite a faltering performance in the first half, Princeton posted its 18th straight Ivy League basketball victory tonight, 69-48, over Harvard in Jadwin Gymnasium.

The victory lifted the Tigers' won-lost record to 18-4 over all and 10-0 in the Ivy League as they took one more step toward a title that has eluded them since 1969.

Harvard, which lost to Penn, 80-75, last night, took an 8-0 lead in the opening minutes on baskets by Muli Hannemann and Jonas Honnick.

But sparked by Armond Hill, who scored 17 of his game-high 21 points in the first half, the Tigers began to hit the mark and moved to their first lead, 13-12, at 11 minutes 46 seconds.

After the lead changed several times, Princeton went ahead to stay on a jumper by Hill and increased the margin to 27-20 at halftime.

The Tigers' doldrums, during which they shot only 34 percent from the floor during the first half, ended as Barnes Hauptfuhrer opened the second half with two straight baskets. He became the 12th Princeton player to hit the 1,000-point career mark. Hauptfuhrer ended with 14 points.

With Hauptfuhrer leading the way, the Tigers outscored the Crimson, 16-4, in the next 5 minutes to seal the victory.
